			Acres.	Barley.	Oats.	Wheat.	Potatoes.
P. 43 P. 44		Charles George Everard	3	4	4	1	2	Two wells, forty feet deep each, including three feet of water at all seasons.	Thirty acres—partly with posts, two rails, and narrow paling, and partly with posts and four rails.	Wheat—two acres, sown in the middle of July; a good crop, and free from smut; seed from Van Diemen's Land; one acre sown about the latter end of July, with seed grown on the same soil in 1839, a very good crop, very slightly smutted. Barley, sown in the end of July—seed partly from the Cape of Good Hope and partly English—yielded very good crops; but the latter was the best. Oats, sown in July, were cut green for feed. Maize, planted in the beginning of September, promising well. Two dwelling-houses—one of pise, the other of brick; stable, stock-yard, sheep-pens, &c.
P. 53		Walter Thompson	4	5	1 1/2	2	2 1/2	From section 44.	One hundred and thirty-four acres—partly with bank, ditch, and one rail, and partly with bank, ditch, and two rails.	Wheat, sown in June, yielded an indifferent crop, full of smut. Barley, sown in July, proved a good crop. Oats were cut green for feed. Maize, planted in September, looking well. Potatoes, planted in August from bad seed, yielded a very irregular crop, but of large size. A temporary hut erected on the farm, &c.
